

Crafty twist to an old concept

The dispute-settling hand game Rock, Paper, Scissors has been transformed into a celebration of handcrafted art.

Paper, Scissors, Rock – and Wood pushes the boundaries of traditional craftsmanship with the intricate fragility of paper-crafted works, the precision and sturdiness of metal and stone, and the tactile warmth of wood.

The sculptural exhibition brings together artists Gary Casey, a sculptor known for his dynamic and complex metal pieces, David Jay Reed, a master of paper sculpture, and Ernst Schneider who fuses the natural elements of wood and stone with contemporary aesthetics.

Paper, Scissors, Rock – and Wood is showing in Westralia Square's foyer on St Georges Terrace, weekdays from this Monday, August 18, to Friday September 5.

At a launch this Sunday, from 1.30pm, Art Gallery of WA director Colin Walker will give an overview of the exhibition and its themes.
